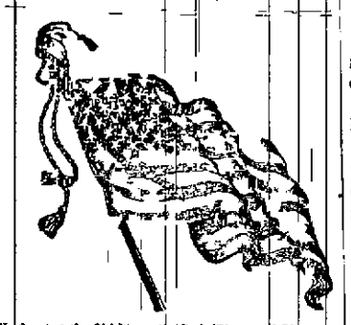
TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 24 1864



No flag but the Old Flag—the Red White and Blue
With the stars of a Union outbroken true
Arise and defend the possessions of the true
Whose blood fought the banner your veterans gave

SOMEBODY HURT —The Democratic papers up the valley are ferocious in their attacks upon Judge Williams and Governor Gibbs, on account of their recent effective speeches in defence of the Government We are therefore compelled to believe that the patriotic champions are striking severe blows in some weak place—hitting somebody where it hurts Of course, if they tell the truth—and none better than they can thoroughly expose all the mischievous and treasonable intentions of their former political associates,—the Democracy will be offended and will denounce them as renegades but such abuse is an honor to them, for it proves that in abandoning a bad cause, and in advocating the interests of freedom and the welfare of the Republic, they recognize a claim upon them above and beyond old party associations,—a claim, arising from the obligations resting upon every citizen who is faithful to his country They can well afford to bear the reproach, which may be heaped upon them by sympathizers with treason, as it is a proof that they no longer work for or act with the enemies of the Nation, nor if their efforts were idle and vain should we find their opponents complaining of their action The power of truth as uttered and enforced by them is mighty and is effectively destroying the strongholds of political treason it is therefore welcomed by all loyal men, while it fills the hearts of Northern rebels with anxiety and dismay and rage

DEFINING A POSITION —The Marysville Express thus defines a position

We will support any man who is known to be a Sound Democrat, that may be nominated by the Chicago Convention, on a sound doctrine of principle—but all the steam power, or power and locomotive power in the State can never drag us to the polls to vote for a man pledged to a vigorous prosecution of the war

That is plain talk, but how does it suit Col Kelly and those Democrats, who in the Albany Convention seemed to have a longing love for the Union and wanted the rebellion, which they condemned to be put down by force, if peaceable means proved ineffectual? The Express distinctly repudiates all measures to control the South, and of course desires its independence to be acknowledged It will not support any candidate who thinks differently It defends and justifies secession, and expects its party to take the same ground Are Oregon Democrats ready to do this? Doubtless some may be, but we know that there are very many who are not yet so utterly lost—so entirely destitute of all emotions of patriotism, as to be willing to sacrifice the country Let all this class reflect for a little, and they cannot fail to see that they have no business to continue to act with a party which seeks to destroy the country, and prefers the success of treason to the safety and integrity of the Union

THE CANVASS IN CLACKAMAS —A correspondent at Milwaukie, referring to the meeting there yesterday says

Mr Myers, Democratic candidate for the Senate, began the discussion with a set speech against the Administration, Negro Equality, Amalgamation, but no words against the rebels, who are trying to destroy the Government of our fathers Mr Eddy followed, defending the action of the Administration, in the measures adopted by it, for the inviolate support of the Constitution and the Laws Mr Wolff then took the stand and spoke of the invitation extended to Mr Hodgkinson to canvass with him in this campaign, and inferred that he was afraid to meet him in debate or else that he felt secure of his election, that it was not worth the time and trouble to go round with him He affirmed that he was a good Union man and as proof of his loyalty declared that the President had repudiated the Constitution, and destroyed the habeas corpus act This was the substance of his speech Mr Hodgkinson being present, met the allegations in a gentlemanly and handsome manner, fully vindicating his action and showing himself fully able, without any aid, to take care of his own interests, and to defend and aid the Union cause in Oregon

Mr Striglit was the next one who appeared as the expounder of the rebel programme and insisted that all our national troubles have been caused by the Abolitionists Then followed Mr Wade in an argumentative speech, fully meeting the assertions of the former speakers

Is it not strange Mr Editor that these sticklers for the Union can find no words of condemnation for treason—can find no word of commendation for anything that tends to support the Constitution and laws?

HOMŒOPATHIC TREATMENT —The Democracy seem to favor this system, and to imagine that "the hair of a dog is good for his bite" Its leaders insist that they only can restore the Union as it was, or in other words that having brought all the terrible woes and sacrifice upon the land, which now afflict it they alone are capable of relieving it and causing peace and prosperity again to bless it They waste their breath and their time The people have had enough of their management, and have discovered that the gods of their idolatry are unworthy of any more worship We might as well expect the fire, which has destroyed a city to build it up again as to look to the Democratic party with any hope that it could or would save the nation in its present peril or would restore it to its former condition.

ADDRESS AT VANCOUVER —Rev M Atkinson, of this city, will speak at Vancouver this evening, by invitation of the Ladies Sanitary Aid Society We trust that a full audience will listen to him, as we are sure that what he will say, is well worthy of the attention of those who feel an interest in the welfare of the "Citizen Soldier"

Opening of the Great New York Sanitary Fair

Eastern papers give glowing accounts of the magnificent ceremonies by which this grand exhibition was inaugurated on the 4th of April The day was a public holiday The largest military procession ever seen in New York filled the streets The city was dressed in flags, and nothing was left undone which could give splendor to the occasion At eight o'clock in the evening in the Union Hall during the Seventh Regiment Band struck up Hail Columbia" and Generals Dix Sandford, Hall De Trobriand and Burnside entered and took the places which had been assigned them on a platform built my overlooking the the thousands that occupied the floor of the great bazaar The "Star Spangled Banner" was given by a number of vocalists that had been selected for the occasion from among the best of our city choir and General Hall introduced the Rev Dr Adams who invoked the Divine blessing The Army Hymn by Oliver Wendell Holmes was sung by S C Campbell accompanied by a full chorus and band after which General Dix surrendered the Fair to the ladies in a neat and impressive speech

The Rev Henry W Bellows President of the United States Sanitary Commission who at noon embarked on board the Champion, sent in the following letter which was read

ABOARD THE CHAMPION, FOR CALIFORNIA }
April 21—1 P M }

To the Ladies' Committee of the Metropolitan Fair—Ladies When at the Union League Club Rooms on the 21st day of November last in the midst of a pouring rain I met the fifty ladies or more who came together at the call of the Sanitary Commission, to inaugurate this enterprise I saw already in their earnest faces the presage of the grand success which has ever since crowned their labors—the certainty of that generous support the fruits of which he so richly around to your place of benevolence I predicted then, what the hopeful patriotism of your hearts was able to echo, a glorious consummation for our projected Fair You took hold of the enterprise with the vigor of men and the devotion of women You have spent four months of incessant labor in organizing success Your council chamber has known all the warm controversies the honest conflicts of policy and opinion which attend great undertakings Your movements I have been watched with jealous eyes by clergy and laity, by parties and by sects, by press and people You have had innumerable Committees to arrange and harmonize local ambitions to satisfy, antagonistic interests and desire to reconcile and pacify Your work has brought you into contact with all classes of society You have found the deepest sympathy among the poorest ranks of our people Amid all your cares and anxieties you have kept peace and concord with each other, and sacrificed personal considerations and preferences to the common object

Whatever difficulties may in our cities have attended similar enterprises no pains as who have ever attempted to unite this heterogeneous metropolis in any common object political, social or humane can doubt that the obstacles to be overcome are, in the nature of things vastly greater here than anywhere else in this country The extent of our population the distinct nationalities, separate spheres of interest the various layers of independent life composing New York with the political religious and social jealousies prevailing here make a grand common movement, for any end or object a triumph of ingenious arrangement and organized address A successful Presidential campaign in this city requires less labor and patience and skill than you have shown in mustering such immense forces and uniting so vast a proportion of our New York population in the Metropolitan Fair The money you have already evoked, the stores and supplies you have accumulated the vast munitions prepared to carry on your gentle warfare of the strongholds of the people's pockets, all foreshadow the greatness of the pecuniary result which is to crown your skilled labor in this humane cause

Ladies I thank you in the name of the sick and wounded soldiers to whose solace you have flown, for your devoted services As the official head of that Commission in whose behalf you are accumulating the means of relief, I return you the profound homage of our hearts for your patient patriotic and splendid endeavors soon to prove your brilliant success You have enlisted the business enterprise the artistic taste, the local pride the religious sensibility, the universal humanity of this vast community in our service Your buildings in Fourteenth street and Union Square your magnificent picture gallery your wondrously varied stalls your tables of gifts from Rome, Paris Liverpool, London and Isewhere the great contributions of New Jersey, the noble show in the Fire and Police Departments, your Musical Hall with all the beautiful concerts that have preceded and will accompany the Fair, generous contributions of churches, schools and places of amusement the preparations made on so prodigious a scale to clothe, amuse and gratify the children the restaurant with its invaluable head and profuse accommodations for the inner, though not the outer man your Knickerbocker kitchen your Indian tribe on its own hunting ground your arms and trophies, your rich photographic and autographic collections, your exquisite floral display and your magic lights and decorations What in short have you not succeeded in bringing together for the delight and instruction of every sense and of all faculties of each and every age and station in this Metropolitan Fair? the substantial fabric of what was a mere vision four months ago I will not undertake to thank through you, the gentlemen's Committee you called to your assistance. They have found their work laborious and exhausting beyond their own expectations They will look back to the public for their reward, not to any praise of mine

Nor should I presume to offer you these heartfelt congratulations and thank offerings had not my position for three years, as the head of the United States Sanitary Commission, brought me into such affecting relations with the women of America as the official almoner of millions of their bounty as to encourage me to indulge my own heart in thus freely addressing you

Called for a few months to the Pacific coast by the interests of the Sanitary Commission I start on my voyage the very day you embark in yours Your ocean is the popular heart—may it be strong as the Atlantic, mild as the Pacific I seek the Golden Gate You I trust, will find it even earlier than I shall, and among the best welcomes I anticipate on arriving at San Francisco with the Divine blessing on the 28th of April is the clasp of the trans continental telegraph announcing that the Metropolitan Fair has realized a million and a half of dollars God bless you ladies and your associates of the gentlemen's Committee

God bless our noble soldiers, cherish our sick and wounded, and give our country and our cause speedy and perfect success

I have the honor to be, with perfect gratitude and profound respect, your obedient friend and servant

HENRY W BELLOWS
President U S Sanitary Commission

The Hallelujah Chorus was then given by the united chorus of the city, and when the applause had subsided Joseph H Choate was introduced to reply to a speech of General Dix

Choate in behalf of the ladies accepted the treasures which General Dix had presented and pledged the fair recipients to finish the glorious work which had been so auspiciously begun Choate closed with a brilliant period, and the chorus, and the audience and band joined in the magnificent old doxology "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow

REMOVAL OF SUPERINTENDENT HALE —We learn from a gentleman who arrived by the steamer, having recently left Washington that the report of the removal of Mr C H Hale, Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Washington Territory is correct and that Mr McMillon, of Wisconsin, has been appointed as his successor and the appointment has been confirmed Mr McMillon has given the required bonds and left Washington for his home, to close up some private business having then decided whether he would come to this coast overland or by sea Mr Hale will probably, however, be at his official post in a few weeks

NEW YORK May 21 —The Tribune has the following Army of the Potomac 20th Corps Abou The enemy left the vicinity of Spotsylvania our whole force across the river Spotsylvania about dark within three fortifications of Fredericksburg Heights Heavy musketry The rebels had on the ground at the time were two regiments of Wigfall's brigade Two brought up the remainder of his force met the rebel attack and drove the enemy back into the woods Considering the ruggedness of the ground when once fairly engaged the fresh veteran troops behaved nobly The fighting was unusually heavy and will probably reach 1 000 in killed, wounded and missing The rebels gave way to confusion The centre of the enemy rests exactly with Tyler's heavy artillery division, though Ledlie's division of the 9th corps and afterwards the 5th corps were sent to his support and formed a line enabling him to withdraw after driving the enemy several miles and clearing Ny Valley The composition of the rebels appeared to be great the major portion of Rebel's division scattering to the woods

The Tribune has a special dispatch dated headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, 18th, 2 o'clock P M, says

Our lines of communication are all right to night and there is a large quantity of supplies constantly coming

Jenny's Station, 15 miles south of Fredericksburg is in our possession To this point the rebels have been bringing supplies from Bowling Green, their depot It is now believed that they bring supplies across the North Anna river from the Virginia Central Railroad a distance of 20 miles

NEW YORK May 21 —The Herald says the rebel loss must have been very heavy in proportion to the number engaged on the 19th Their dead and wounded lay up to thick on some portions of the lines Mounds of prisoners were coming in until midnight Six hundred have already been brought in Those who so firing of consequence during the night, and none at all yesterday morning, the 20th The rebels withdrew from their position in our rear, under cover of Light Our old flank movement to the left was resumed again yesterday morning

Lee is believed to be leaving his entrenchments around Spottsylvania for one further south and east of them

BERMUDA HUNDRED May 18 —The Richmond Despatch says the enemy have concentrated in Va If beaten there they are beaten everywhere If they win there they win everything The war and the Confederacy might continue, but if Virginia be lost the present Confederate organization will not probably survive

NEW YORK May 20 —Intelligence has been received that the Spanish fleet have taken possession of the Chincha Guano Islands, and raised the Spanish flag The most singular part of the proceeding is that not only have the Islands been seized as a guarantee for the redress sought by Spain for certain injuries alleged to have been suffered by Spanish citizens in Peru, but the Spanish Admiral, announcing the seizure, states that he has also retained as hostages, several officers of the Peruvian navy, who are to be held answerable for any insult to the Spanish subjects

Members of the diplomatic corps in Peru, the American consul presiding, held a meeting to protest against the seizure Among those present, cordial unanimity prevailed It was noticed that the French minister was absent

A key West correspondent of the 12th announces the capture of Tampa Bay Florida, on the 4th On entering the town our troops charged at double quick and surprised the inhabitants It was found that the rebel troops had left the day before to reinforce Lee's army A few prisoners were taken One blockade runner was captured and the fortifications destroyed

GREELEY ON NEVADA —The Tribune, in an article on the wealth of Nevada says

A great deal of money has already been made by mining in Nevada, and in the hard times more doubtless will be in due time. With the Pacific Railroad (or even a part of it) to bring them relatively cheap fuel and forages the mines of this sterile region will be useless be worked to far greater extent and productively than they now can be and that railroad will many have within ten years at farthest. We predict that he could be born who will see this country producing gold and silver to the amount of two hundred millions of dollars per annum and then we will have greenbacks and gold at par unless the former being more profitable should at some points command a small premium Uncle Sam has his difficulties, but he is not going to fail.

HORACE GREELEY'S POSITION —The Eastern papers have discussed with much warmth, the course of Mr Greeley in reference to the Presidential question—some justifying it, and others blaming him very bitterly because he presumed to have and to express such opinions as he entertained In an address recently made by him before the Central Union Club of Brooklyn, he thus stated his views, from which his preference as to candidates may be inferred

I have sometimes supposed I have often reproved what has been done at Washington in high quarters the contrary I have found more which more to praise to censure But still I say that therefore some occasion whereon I have felt that a more determined a more pronounced opposition and a readier perception of the change in relation of things would have been a great public service I do feel very great admiration of and more than admiration profound appreciation of that sort of electric sagacity that quick perception that led John C Fremont to say that our struggle which shall be free? (Applause) As then with General Benjamin Butler a man with whom I never voted in any time in my life a man with whom I never think I could ever sympathize—I do say that man has shown that he has known how to deal with rebels better than any other man we have. (Cheers) It is felt that other than man who should ask to subvert a loyal government is guilty of a very great crime Now I hold that they were guilty of crime and I believe then further was right to begin the war in New Orleans Because you are in rebellion against my country you are my enemy and I will treat you as enemies—which is the way to treat them and if they had been treated so at Washington from the start I do not believe there would have been a traitor in office to-day I have said all I have to say on the subject I am to the last a radical and expect to be for them as long as I live

REMINISCENCE OF EARLY DAYS IN PORTLAND Rev G H Atkinson, the present pastor of the Congregational Church in this city, remembers that the second time he preached in Portland the last Sabbath in July, 1849, the first of the shingle building that has just disappeared to give place to Mr Parrish's new three story brick, was opened for the purpose. There among bales and boxes, about twenty-five persons were assembled, who gave good attention, and who were perhaps as much profited as if the accommodations had been better The occasion was enlivened somewhat by the fact that Captain Wood of the steamer Massachusetts, then lying at the wharf, the wonder of the Indians and harbinger of hope to the whites, was present at the meeting, with perhaps others from the vessel Mr Atkinson's first occasion of preaching at Portland was about the 1st or 3d Sabbath of June, 1849, in a log shingle shop, without windows, but with spacious openings," on Second or Third street The following note was made in his journal, on returning to Oregon City,

On Saturday went to Portland Preached twice to a full house in the afternoon to a crowded audience The leading citizens have subscribed liberally ($2 000) to erect a church There seems to be a desire of the different religious denominations to have the service of the different ministers I encouraged them that we the Presbyterians Rev Clark Rev C Bells, and myself would preach there once a fortnight.'

Rev Horace Lyman, now of Forest Grove, arrived in November, 1849, located at Portland and soon commenced teaching and preaching in the school house The next year he commenced building the present Congregational Church Rev Mr Wilbur, then stationed at Oregon City, also commenced building the Methodist Church Both were very like enterprises, merchants and other citizens, still it was a heavy work for both ministers, but they struggled on nobly and successfully Colonel Wm M King worked hard in getting out timber for the school house and showed great zeal in pushing forward the school project, the interest of which to our churches to this day On Monday morning preaching in the old shingle warehouse Mr Atkinson, in company with D H L Swedale and Col King, loosed for Church lots Two were selected near Mr W S Ladd's present residence, after the old fashioned high sites" for the dwelling house of the Lord Mr Wilbur's choice seemed to be as near as possible to the busy marts of trade When Mr Lyman came a medium was struck the present site of the Congregational Church was selected, and the former given up The proprietors graciously consented to the change the lots to the present location as well other lots for churches etc

FISH —Our market is well supplied with fish yesterday morning, and of a multitude of species the glassy-eyed Cod to the round and slippery eel. There are species of shell-fish, the finest but of which these are the and by common called "sea eggs." They are all unlike anything we have a shell being small and oval in the bottom, from which by which the mechanism The shell has a ground moss but which is ruddy and when cleaned off beautiful purple They are curiosity, we presume as we are not posted as to whether or not A large sale and much attention, and was probably one of the kind ever brought to Portland We understand it will be disposed and to the curiosity cabinet of Buchtel & Carswell

SALE OF PEW A larger crowd assembled yesterday afternoon at the Presbyterian church for the purpose of purchasing pews for the ensuing Sixty dollars was the highest sum bid for choice, and the whole amount of rent and premiums was about $3 600, for over fifty pews disposed of, leaving fifteen or more still to be sold

CONVICTS —Sheriff Coffey of Wasco county, arrived on the steamer Senator last evening, bringing with him two candidates who have lately been elected to the Penitentiary One of these individuals Smythe is sent for three years He was formerly of this city, a young man and a good mechanic but he has "come to grief" through shiftlessness

FLOATING AWAY —Several hundred cords of wood are in a precarious way, about this time at present and stand a fair chance of floating on the river The water has already scattered some at the foot of Alder street, and a large quantity on the opposite side of the river will go in a few days if the water continues to rise unless it is removed

SURROUNDED —The high water has completely covered several of our best wharves, and renders a delineation of labor necessary to the business of shipping Couch's wharf was surrounded yesterday, with steamers and vessels the Reveal landing over an old walk to the salt mill

THE STEAMER Senator made a trip to the Cascades yesterday, in the service of the O S N Company, carrying 100 tons of freight and 90 passengers On the return trip she brought 50 passengers and Wells, Fargo & Co's express with $25,000 in treasure.

COLD CHARITY —About 10 o'clock last night a fellow who had undertaken to "bilk" his landlord out of a board bill, was overhauled on Front street and compelled to deliver up his blankets and a new pair of boots, before taking ship for California

THE WEATHER —The weather yesterday indulged in sundry gyrations We had light showers warm suns, heavy rains and chilly breezes, all day At noon the weather was good for cabbage plants, and at night it was not

THE PROPELLER —The George S Wright, which has been looked for so many days, we are informed by the Purser of the Pacific, had not yet sailed from Victoria, but would leave on Sunday She may arrive to-day.

TREASURE BY THE STEAMSHIP —The amount of treasure shipped by the steamship Pacific last night was $209,392 Wells, Fargo & Co heading the list with $131,000

Dead in the Desert

Towards the close of a sultry day in the summer of 1860 we camped down upon the banks of a little stream in the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains and in the midst of a sheltered and romantic valley. At a little distance we descried a small pine plank standing endways and most visible above the luxurious herbage that surrounded us—it was just such material as would serve well to kindle our camp fire. A tall rough visaged Missourian—one of our party—rose and moved towards it but suddenly stopped caused a moment returned and in reply to our question, "What is it?" silently pointed to it. One and another visited it each returning silent and pensive—it was a child's grave, with its tablet and its inscription too speaking in that desert solitude with all the holy eloquence of grief

TO OUR ONLY CHILD

LITTLE ANNIE,

AGED FOUR YEARS

A transverse line was cut deep under the word "only," as though the parent would thus emphasize his grief. There was nothing more this was all we could glean of Little Annie" or her belongings. It was very simple, but very touching.

The sun had not yet sunk behind the mountains. Silently and without spoken concert, we struck our camp and moved further down the stream, for it was holy ground, and had been consecrated by a father's and by a mother's tears. That night we rested with the sky for our canopy, and as the moon sailed high, like a silver seal upon the closing day, and the stars like jewels strewed the night sea, we had visions of 'Little Annie" dead in the desert.

"Dead in the desert,' said a grief worn father one day to us. Upon the top of a granite hill within the State of California, a few hundred yards from the old emigrant track, far removed from human habitation, we came to a grave with this inscription upon the head board

Here lies the shattered wreck of a father's hopes,

A BRAVE BOY—A LOVING SON

Then follows a Latin inscription to this purport

None are happy till after death

The occupant of this lone sepulchre was slaughtered by Indians while defending a mother and a sister in the absence of the father, who was a day's journey in advance of them. The mother and sister escaped. The lad was killed within three day's travel of his destination, after a weary journey of two thousand miles.

"Dead in the desert,' said an orphan boy then in the city of Brooklyn, when asked of his father and mother

On the banks of the Rio Colorado, near to the borders of the State of Nebraska, and in direct line from the high prairies of Texas, through New Mexico to Salt Lake City, in Utah, is a solitary grave. By this grave has been erected a strong and substantial headboard, over which has been stretched and securely nailed, while yet green, a buffalo hide, with the flesh outermost, so that in drying it shaped itself to the wood. Upon the parchment surface, with a hot iron has been singed the following inscription

HENRY UDOLR LIES HERE.

Died Sept 14 1854

Pray for his widow and sorrowing boy

Thousands know of the existence of this who have never passed it, and why? More than six hundred miles to the northwest, and on the banks of a crystal stream bearing an Indian name which signifies "Sweet-water," is another grave, with a head board of exactly similar construction. On this head-board is inscribed

THE WIDOW OF HENRY UDOLR LIES HERE.

HIS GRAVE IS ON THE COLONADO.

Pray for their orphan boy

Jan 1st, 1856.

Within little more than three months of each, the husband and wife—the father and mother—lay sleeping in death, with more than six hundred miles of desert between them "What then of the orphan boy?"—More of him anon

"Dead in the desert," said an old Hudson Bay trapper—one of a company who upon a bright moonlight night in the month of October, 1860, on board a craft, were dropping down the stream of the Sacramento toward San Francisco. The old mountaineer had passed a life of hardship and perilous adventure, he bore the scars of many an Indian conflict—he could count his fights with the fierce grizzly of the mountains by scores—knew well the meaning of hunger and of thirst—had buried many a companion in the lone wilderness, stern and rugged in his appearance, with a voice like the low growl of a lion, nevertheless lacking nothing of true human sympathy, his heart beat with the tenderness of a woman's, and the rough sun burnt hand wiped away the starting tear, as he told us of his noble sons who were lying "dead in the desert."

"The ashes of my elder son" said the old man, "lie on the shore of Clear Lake, on the little Island of Alempo shut in by the densely green foliage of the Manzanita at the foot of the sacred mountain Co-noke-te, or High Mountain, whose steep sides are clothed with the tall dark pine which, interlocking with the evergreen oak, shed a funeral gloom over his resting place. My boy was loved by the Indians, who had seen his courage and admired his manly spirit, and, that his grave might be undisturbed by the wild beasts of the mountains, they helped me to raise a funeral pile, and, as the smoke of the blazing pyre curled and twined around the tree tops a mournful wail, prolonged by the echo of the mountains, rose from the assembled Indians—while, to comfort me, they pointed to the western horizon, 'whither,' said they, 'his spirit is passing to its far off home, for he was good, and his spirit has traveled towards sundown where the earth and sky meet and he has become a star.'"

"And what of your younger son?" we inquired

The old man's eyes fell, his lips became compressed his breathing short and quick and the violent heaving of his chest indicate the deep agony of his soul at length in the deepest accents of his rich bass voice, he replied

'He sleeps on the banks of the Sweet water"

Then hastily leaving us, he paced in moody abstraction up and down the deck. There was a sorrow in connection with the death of his son too deep for inquisitive curiosity to meddle with, and we made no further effort to renew the subject

Two hours or more had elapsed and our vessel was nearing a little wooded island about a mile below what is now the landing place to the village of Rio Vista. The old trapper was reclining upon the deck wrapt in silent musings—the silver rays of the moon brightening out in fine relief the care worn rugged features of this grand old man of the mountains

Seating myself by his side, I said

"You mentioned a stream called the Sweet water have you ever seen upon its banks the grave of a widow named Udolf—by birth a Swede?"

"Seen it?" said the old man—'aye often and full well I know' the grave of her husband on the Colorado.

And then beckoning me to follow him to the forecastle he pointed out the decaying trunk of a sycamore tree lying near to the water's edge, hanging from which by an iron chain was the rusty fluke of an old anchor and a short distance further on but almost hidden by the dense underwood he pointed out the ruins of a wooden shanty—the roof crushed in by a fallen sycamore and the whole scene looking weird and desolate.

'Now' said my companion sitting by me, and when I have lit my pipe, I will tell you something of the origin of boy Henry Udolf the Swede—for a strange story hangs to that old anchor fluke'

'It is nearly twelve months ago' said he 'that towards the close of a sultry day I was seeking near this spot an anchorage for the night. For several days I had been successful in trapping beaver, and I sought a suitable place for preparing my game. As I neared the island off which we are now sailing I observed a man intently watching me from the shore and he was evidently seeking to attract my attention so just feeling that my rifle shooter was in readiness, I pulled hard into shore and landed. The stranger advanced to meet me, and confidence was soon established between us. He proved to be a citizen of San Francisco who had been spending some days in this solitary island, to sport among the abundant water fowl

'You seek a camping place for the night' said he. If you will join me we can occupy a ruined shanty close by but first we must bury the body of its late occupant for he lies there cold and lifeless.'

'Dead in the desert!—I found myself involuntarily grasping my revolver. Could my companion be a murderer? But my nerves were too inured to danger to feel fear and so I followed on. We entered the dreary, desolate cabin, and there, upon a heap of withered tule-rushes, lay stretched the body of a man in all the squalid wretchedness of poverty.

"Now,' said the stranger, 'a short distance away is a prospecting hole. We will pick the body there and cover it on, and then I will tell you a strange adventure that concerns that boy, the son of one Henry Udolf.' Henry Udolf, the Swede?' said I, I know the grave of Henry Udolf the Swede on the Rio Colorado' 'The same,' replied my companion 'tis of his son I tell you'

'We hastened to bury the body we burned the tule bedding within the cabin, that we might purify it with fire, and then lighting our pipes I called eagerly for this strange story, and thus he narrated it"
